Kubo lives a quiet, normal life in a small shoreside village until a spirit from the past turns his life upside down by re-igniting an age-old vendetta. This causes all sorts of havoc as gods and monsters chase Kubo who, in order to survive, must locate a magical suit of armor once worn by his late father, a legendary Samurai warrior.

In ancient Japan, Kubo is a young boy who lives with his ill mother, Sariatu, in a cave on top of a mountain. Every day he goes out to a nearby village to tell stories by magically manipulating pieces of paper that form into origami that moves under music played from Kubo's shamisen to the villagers.

I love the art direction of the film and for the concept art. Production designer Nelson Lowry was inspired by Japanese woodblocks and designs that use blocks of strong colours. Kyoshi Saito (1907-1997) was the woodblock maker whose art was the main inspiration with his use of strong shapes and textures.
